FOREWORD

Nepal became a partner to the Project - Guide to the source of Asian History launched under the joint auspices of the UNESCO and the International Council on Archives and with a view to attaining the same objective Nepal organised the National History Guide Committee and through this medium it was proposed to prepare and publish national history source books and this is the second book in the series.

This booklet presented here introduces in brief the Nepalese records in general. Together with these, the indexes and other pieces of information in respect of these records as are available in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Army headquarters as are recorded or maintained in the manner have been made the bases for preparing this source book.

I have hoped that this source booklet would help both the His Majesty's Government and non-governmental organisations study and research the various aspects of the administrative activities and national history. Though attempts have been made to pinpoint the records as are available in various sections, I presume that many omissions may have occurred. An attempt to introduce to the readers the records available in various relevant sections has been made. In fact this is only a medium to identify the records collected in these agencies.

I must thank the Royal Army Headquarters and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs for their contribution to the preparation of this booklet. My special thanks, go to Shyam Sundar Rajbhanshi, epigraphist of the department of Archaeology for his involvement in the task of preparation of this book. Finally I would like to thank Shanta Bahadur Sakya, typist-cum-Nayab Subba for his help in the publication of this book.

Thanks.

Archives: Our Ancestral Heritage

Executive orders are indispensable in every country for operating the day-to-day administration in an organised manner. Any important order is given in writing or maintained. These orders are the important archives of a nation. In this way due to political, economic, social, cultural and geographic causes, one nation in course of time developed reconciliation or friendship and relationship with a neighboring or distant country or countries. Letter or treaties, to settle the problems facing them were exchanged. The treaties letters and the maps defining the boundaries became the public records. Many events as well as natural calamities at different periods of the history of a nation occurred. Many plans and programmes with a view to national development were launched. Many studies and researches on various areas of the development of a country were undertaken or carried out. Various commissions, committees, agencies and similar institutions and persons were deputed or appointed. All these documents of correspondence and reports are preserved as the national archival heritage. In this way the diaries, correspondence and others of those personalities contributing to the progress and development of the nation have been preserved and protected by the world as the invaluable records of a nation.

If we turn the pages of history, such public records, inscriptions, copper plates, gold plates, palm-leaves, records inscribed on wooden frames or documents are found aplenty in the country. In the present essay let us confine ourselves to the documentary records which infact we call documents or records. Whether the public records could not be preserved and practiced or whether they are easily subject to decay, the public records belonging to the Licchavi and Malla period except the hand-written manuscripts of the period are considerably small. The documents of the last few Malla kings are preserved at the National Archives. For example the document dated 884 N.S. of King Jaya Prakash Malla, the last Malla King, providing for the monastery to Bhagavati Ban Gosain. The existence of many hand-written manuscripts dating to the Licchavi and Malla period is an indication that public records might have been in existence even in those periods. The oldest public record found outside the Kathmandu valley seems to be the letter written by King Mukund Sen (First) of Palpa to Dharmagat Pandit. The said letter with the royal seal of King Mukund Sen of Palpa towards the close of the sixteenth century is in the collection of the National Archives.

The letter addressed Dharmagat Pandit, refers to the relations between Gorkha and Palpa. The letter says, "The Kingdoms of Gorkha and Palpa are equal. We should not be of the acquisitions made through the process of Gorkha and keep these in reserve.

It is evident seem all the documents have been preserved in an organised manner after the Gorkha conquest of Nepal by King Prithivi Narayan Shah and his successors. From that period on there was an office named Dafter Khana. Its function was to maintain the records of those officials authorized to collect the rent from the land as remuneration for their services. Such an office was called Dafter Khana.

From the Shah period on, many kinds of public records came to light. Among these are (a) Lal Mohar (Red Royal Seal), (b)Khadga Nisana (sword emblems) (c) Sanad, Sawal, (Charter and rules and regulations).(d) Commander-in-Chief's order (ek chhape)and confirmed by the premier (dui chhape), (e) executive order (Rukka) (f) ordinances and (g) correspondence, treaties and agreements. In the current essay we are going to occupy ourselves mainly with these various orders' Lal Mohars and Khadga Nisana (premier's order) were used as straight order to be immediately put into effect, charters, rules and regulations were used as a corollary to law for the time being in force.

Lal Mohars are those documents with the royal seal in red colour from the time of Prithvi Narayan Shah to the current time for state documents. The old royal seals were oval and dotted with the letters Durga Bhavani and a sword. In 1969 B.S. (1912A.D.) a new royal seal with fine letters was made. The new seal also contains the letters Durga Bhavani and a sword. In addition to this, the new seal contains the zodiac. The seal seems to have come into circulation from February 1913 (8th Phalguna 1969B.S.) Lal Mohars of various kinds are available:

(a) One kind of Lal Mohar with the royal panegyric in full:- Such kind of Lal Mohar was issued at the time of promulgating the new regulations, new constitution and enforcing the customs and usages as the highest royal command.

(b) The red seal with Sri Durga Bhavani:- This type of the red seal was impressed in ordinary grant of land, money, capital punishment and forfeiture of property and the like.

CC-0. Nepal Sanskrit Academy, Kathmandu

Digitized by Sarayu Trust Foundation Delhi and eGangotri.

(c) The red seal with eight planets:- This type of the Royal Seal was used at the time of satisfactory auditing.

(d) Phikdhar (spitting):- The royal command of granting land with the impression of spittle after chewing the betel leaf is called phikdhar.

(e) Palm or lion palm:- This is the royal command with the impression of the royal palm. This type of Lal Mohar was used when any power or special facility was given to a person, or a family or when the responsibility of running the government was entrusted.

(f) In addition to the Lal Mohars mentioned above, there is another kind of executive order named Rukka. This type of executive order contains a small seal, the panegyric of the king and endorsed by the high dignitary of the state.

When the office of the premier, or the like or the commander-in-chief is conferred or some position, honour, remuneration, and appreciation for the services render such instruments are conducted through the Lal Mohars. The Lal Mohar was the supreme royal command through out the kingdom. This includes the executive and judicial proceedings. The Lal Mohars were used for defining the state policies, declaring a war, a treaty and foreign affairs, promulgating the law of the land and enforcing new customs and manners.

Before Jung Bahadur rose to power in 1903 B.S. (1946 A.D.), all the royal commands contained the Lal Mohars. After the office of the premier and commander-in-chief was conferred on Jung Bahadur, Lal Mohars were used when the land grant, capital punishment, life-long imprisonment, degradation of caste, immunisation, excommunication, dispossessing a Brahmin or a Ksetriya of his holy thread, conferring the office of Subba or Rai on the Kirats of the far Kirat region, creating the office of the priest at the holy places in India and certifying the fiscal transactions as correct through the office of Auditing office were made. The Lal Mohar did not contain the royal seal alone. Prior to the Rana administration, the Lal Mohar was counter-signed or testified by the Prime Minister, the royal collateral, the royal priest or preceptor, the judge or the Sardar or prominent nobles. After October 1855 (10th Asvina, 1912) during the administration of Jung Bahadur, Lal Mohars had to be preserved through the premier, the commander-in-chief, four commanding generals, the commanding colonel, the chief priest, the precept chief royal collateral the judge (Kazi) and the royal treasurer. After 4th Vaisakha, 1944 (April 1988 A.D.), this was maintained at the office of the judge of the criminal court, the royal priest, the royal treasurer, the officer-in-charge of the police station, together with the commanding colonel - When the clearance certificate was given by the auditing office, it was done through the district governor, his assistant and the section chief. To take custody of such document some used thumb impression while other signed them. The Lal Mohar without the name of the custodian was declared in valid as provided under the law of the land. The copy of the Lal Mohar was kept at the Dafter Khana and the Royal treasury The law of the land provided that the copy of the Lal Mohar if not found at those offices should be declared null and void After the Ranas took over the administration, the Lal Mohar had not to be sent to the King for confirmation. The blank sheets of the Lal Mohar used to be kept at the Royal Treasury That blank sheet was used for the purpose There was the practice of the confirmation from the Royal Palace when the clearance certificate was given by the Audit Office

It is evident that the importance of the Lal Mohars during the Rana regime was relegated from the time of premier Bir Shumshere on, and they brought into practice of issuing their executive orders with the emblem of a sword. In fact, it was used in the beginning by the Rana premiers for their individual tasks, but in course of time they became more and more powerful and despotic and their executive orders superseded the Lal Mohars. The document bearing the emblem of sword of the premier became the virtual Lal Mohar as a matter of fact, just to avoid confrontation with the King, the Rana premiers used Lal Mohars for sentencing a person to death or making treaty agreements. In reality, it was a more provision for complying with the administrative requirement. The executive order with the emblem of the sword was put into effect for proclamation of national policy, a new constitution and a new law or issuing fiscal instruction, military and foreign relations statements, through oral commands and Lal Mohars were commanded to be made through the executive orders bearing the emblem of sword. Such documents with the emblem of sword are of two types: one kind of this type of the document carries a sword or a trident with the signature of the premier and the other type with the small seal of the premier. The latter is also known as the neki (polite) seal. It was kept in the custody of the wife of the premier. Generally,the former was used at first for day-to-day administrative purposes. The second type was used for sword-bearing documents,charters, rules and regulations and laws. The charters of great significance were signed by the premier himself. Generally the term charter implies instructions, guidelines or any governmental order or certificates. The one seal document implies the executive order or instruction to the offices of the capital or to an individual by the commander-in-chief with the Neki (polite) seal or under his own signature. The two-seal documents or the charters are put into effect when reports or petitions are submitted by any office or individuals and on when such reports or petitions are not submitted, the executive order to do any task in the manner prescribed or cause such a task to be done or execute any order or the rules giving instructions to implement any task assigned or any guidelines, provisions or appointment or any documents bearing such items are called two seal documents or the charters, such document bear the seal or the signature of the premier and the commander-in-chief. The executive order (Rukka)bore the large seal which contained the name of the premier in Nepali, English, Urdu and Tibetan. Such type of seal has seemingly come into effect from the time of Jung Bahadur. That seal was specifically used in documents emanating from the Munshi Khana (Department of Foreign Affairs) and it was counter-signed by the office-in-charge of the Munshi Khana. This seal was kept in the custody of the commander-in-chief. The executive order with the large seal of the premier and that of the commander-in-chief, large or small is called a Rukka. This originated from the office of the Khadga Nisana and it was impressed on the column for the executive order of the commander-in-chief responsible for it. This contained the panegyric of the premier and the commander-in-chief and this was construed as a charter as well. The public notice, or the communique or advertisement and the like emanating from the Government is called an ordinance.For approving the promulgation of this ordinance, the large seal of the premier and that of the commander-in-chief are impressed.Any letter written by the premier to a person under his own signature is called a charter (bada patra). A treaty or an agreement is one signed by the duly authorized person or persons of both countries in respect of boundary disputes, trade, transit,law and order and similar many other national or international issues and problems and arriving at a decision through mutual negotiation. Two or more countries may be parties to such agreement.

From the statements referred to above, it is evident that these documents and public records are one of our invaluable assets. Prior to the great fire, all the important documents public records were housed in the various ministries and departments of the Singha Durbar Secretariate. Besides those places,the public records of HMG were scattered in different offices like the Gosvara Tahabil of Hanuman Dhoka, the Kitab Khana(currently Harihar Bhavan and the Lagat Phant (Dilli Bazar). Of the public records preserved and protected at the Singha Durbar Secretariate maintained by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs at a place called Jaisikotha are very important. Possibly the Joshis or the astrologers were in charge of correspondence in the royal palace from the beginning of the Shah administration. In addition to correspondence, they preserved and protected the documents relating to administration. Therefore the room handling the correspondence was called the Joshikotha or the Jaisikotha. This office seems to have been in existence since the time of Jung Bahadur. At that time a person named Kasinath was in charge of the office. At that time the office handled foreign correspondence specifically with Tibet and China in respect of postal service and the personal budget of the King. A person named Manohar succeeded Kasinath. After Monohar, Puspa Raj, Jujuman and Sardar Medini Prasad successively took over the office. Sardar Medini prasad had been working up to 2024 B.S.(1967 A.D.) even after his retirement. Even before the Rana take-over of the administration, the foreign affairs were handled by an office named Munshi Khana. It seems this office was organised during the administration of General Bhimsen Thapa.Premier Bhimsen Thapa conferred the title of Munshi to a gentleman named Laxmi Das whose descendants had been handling the business of the office up to the time of democracy. In fact the Jaisikotha was a small office subordinate to the Munshi Khana.After this office was organised, it handled matters relating to Tibet. The Munshi Khana handled other foreign relations in respect of policy matters, preservation and management of public records. Both the offices were supervised by Kazi Marich Man towards the year 1918/1919 A.D. (1975/1976 B.S.). Both the offices were organised as the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in 1951(2007 B.S.).

The documents relating to foreign affairs were housed at the Gallery Hall of Hanuman Dhoka.During the administration of Premier Jung Bahadur, those documents were taken to his residence at Thapathali.Premier Bhim Shumshere took those documents to Tangal, his residence. The great earthquake of 1934 A.D.

(1990B.S.) took a great toll of these documents. All the documents lay scattered. After the earthquake of 1934 these documents were assembled somehow and taken to the building now housing the Army headquarter at Tundikhel and to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs at Singha Durbar after the advent of democracy. Though the great fire of Singha Durbar destroyed some of these documents, a sizable portion of the important documents survived.

There were about 300 bundles of the public records housed in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs by the year 1965 (2022 B.S.).These documents were sorted out from the time of King Prithivi Narayan Shah. The indexes on the basis of subjects were made in course of time. The documents from the time of Chandra Shumshere in 1909 A.D. were maintained in a serial manner of these documents. About 3000 items have already been microfilmed.These documents are safely preserved and protected in the new building of the Singha Durbar.

The Lagat Phant subordinate to the Department of Revenue,Ministry of Finance within the Charkhal complex at Dilli Bazar has public records of about 3000 bundles. The documents brought from Birta Phant, Lagat Phant and Phutkar (miscellaneous) Phantall subordinate to the Ministry of Finance have 13 indexes.Which are arranged serially and subject wise and contain other particulars so that the conditions of the public records can easily be identified. All the documents relating to sales,distribution and mortgage of land since 1800 B.S. (1743 A.D.) are available there. The documents were studied and sorted for three years 1941 to 1943 A.D. (1998 to 2001 B.S.) and relevant documents were retained there and the rest were sent to the Tahabil Gosvara at Hanuman Dhoka. Some of these documents were related to foreign affairs for example those documents of the relations between Nepal and Tibet and the presents to the British officers of England and India. Such documents relating to foreign affairs number about 200 bundles. Two persons - captain Jaya Bahadur Rana and subba Umeshwar are responsible for organising and maintaining these records.

All the old documents that are not required for day-to-day administration were sent to Gosvara Tahabil or Tahabil Gosvara at Hanuman Dhoka from the districts headquarters and courts all over the Kingdom. Such public records were kept in nine large rooms.The rooms were named after the contents for example Nepal Phant No. 1 Nepal Phant No. 2, Hill Phant, Bhaktapur Survey, Tarai Phant No. 1, Tarai Phant No. 2 and other rooms contain such materials. It contains mostly the estimate of the budget, the revenue, estimate, documents relating to earthquake, documents of the over all supervisory office and those records of the revenue-collecting offices. Such documents were housed in Nepal Phant No. 2, Hill Phant No. 1 and Tarai Phant (section) No. 1. The room named Bhaktapur Survey contains the public records of the survey report of Bhaktapur, 1980 B.S. (1923 A.D.). Similarly the survey reports of the Tarai and the hill regions are kept in respective rooms. The majority of the documents housed in the Gosvara Tahabil relates to land, the transaction of land,accounts, the records of receipts and expenditures of money,suits, on-the-spot inquiry report and depositions. For want of indexes and the table of contents, it was a Herculean task to find out relevant documents. Prior to 1949 A.D. (2006 B.S.) such documents lay scattered on the floors of the rooms. Later on an officer named Mayanath provided racks for shelving some of the documents. The same officer got the documents scrutinised and those documents deemed important were sent to the Lagat Phant at Dilli Bazar.

All the public records of such offices as Kausal (council),Law Office, Law Estimate Office, National Administration Office,National Office, Department of Law, Law and Regulations Section,and the Ministry of Law and Justice after 2007 (1951 A.D.) were intact upto the time of the great fire at Singha Durbar. There were about 30 leather - bound volumes from the time of Jung Bahadur, besides hundreds of charters, regulations, executive orders with the impressions of the sword and the red seal. Upto1909 (1852 A.D.), the administration of the country was conducted through charters and regulations and the law was not enforced in an organized manner. There were about 900 copies of such charters and regulations covering the period 1902 A.D. to 1950(1959 to 2007 B.S.) There were indexes of these copies.Together with these, there were about 1100 items of the documents with the impression of the sword, one small seal, double seals and the like covering the period 1888 to 1950 (1945 to 2007B.S.).

The Supreme Court has the public records of the documents from 1935 (1991 B.S.) to 1950. Of these 125 items related to order and obiterdicta. These books contain in brief the names of the plaintiff and the defendant, the section chief, the lowest court taking cognizance of the offense, appeal, opinion, date,opinion of assistant members, the order of the presiding officer and the date and the remarks. Besides there, there were about 5or 6 bundles containing charters, standing rules and executive orders. Among these, the majority of documents deal in the retention of office, provisions for positions and new appointments, taking away the harvest by force, pay increment and the like.

The Misil Phant of Charkhal at Dilli Bazar under the Bagmati zonal court contains another collection of public records. It was estimated that about three lakhs documents were available there. The documents from 1905 A.D. (1962 B.S.) were available there. There were about 150 items of indexes for each year affected. The said indexes contain the serial No. the names of the plaintiff and the defendant, the nature of the suit, the date of judgement and the number of the documents affected therein.From the study of the indexes, the nature of the suits, the judgements and the decisions of the inferior and the superior courts could be studied. On the front page of each document, an index-like three-column sheet was maintained. The documents finding entry in the first column were never destroyed because it contained the synopsis of the document. The documents finding entry in the second column were destroyed after each five year sand there was the provision that the documents entered in the third column were destroyed annually, but, where the suit was litigated and the higher courts moved, such documents were not destroyed and were destroyed after final disposal.

Prior to the year 2008 (1951 A.D.), the army headquarter handled all the functions of the Ministry of Defence. This office was set up by Premier Jung Bahadur after his European tours. In those days there were two offices subordinate to the Army headquarter - one was commandary Kitab Khana and the other Bali Talav. After 2008 (1951 A.D.) changes were effected in the Army and in pursuance of those changes the Royal Army headquarter was founded. There were 20 offices under the jurisdiction of the Army headquarter. These office maintained all the documents relating to their operations, but the public records of more important nature were maintained in the operations Department,organisational set-up, war-operations guidance office and(commandary Kitab Khana Entry Section).

The original name of the operations Department was Arga. This office handled the appointment of the army personnel deputation, summoning them to hunting expeditions, marriages tonsure and other ceremonies. This department had about 500volumes of public records some of which were hard bound. For example the records relating to the hunting expedition of the King Emperor of England in 1911 (1968 B.S.); the records relating to cannon-firing for failure of monsoon in 1921 (1978) the book containing the correspondence in respect of the refugees fleeing from Burma to Nepal; (4) the diary prepared by General Min Sumshere in 1906 (1963 B.S.) in respect of the invitation sent to the prince of wales by Premier Jung Bahadur; (5) the document relating to the calculation in respect of waging war against Tibet (6) the catalogue containing the names of those who were killed or wound in action in the battle of Luck now when the Nepalese soldiers went to help the British in 1857 (1914 B.S.);(7) a book containing the copies of the executive order of the Commander-in-Chief in respect of 4 platoons deputed during the Anglo-German war of 1914 and (8) the copies of the various charters, regulations, operation order, the management for providing ration and water and paying damages for the Nepalese goods plundered by the Tibetans during Nepal-Tibet war of 1940 B.S.(?)

The war operating office handled all operations relating to troop mobilisation. This office had seven books with the collection of public records. These books did not have indexes,but the table of contents on the title pages of the books would help find out the subjects containing there in. The major subjects of these documents are (a) the book containing the blueprint in respect of proposed war with Tibet prepared by General Bir Shumshere with the permission of Commander-in-Chief Dhir Shumshere under the Command of Premier Ranoddip Sing. (b) the original book of Tibet outlined by the Military Management Office in 1929 (1986 B.S.) in respect of handling arms and ammunitions and other equipment (3) a book of the time of Jung Bahadur with the plan and route to attack Lhasa as the Tibetan authorities failed to respond for four months in respect of the goods of the Nepalese merchants plundered by the Tibetans and (5) about 2000leather-bound books with justification for stationing Nepalese troops in India for the help of the British Government as the Great War had broken out in Europe. The Commander Book Military Entry Section under the operations Department organisation contains the names, pay, transfer, promotion and other information about the military personnel of the 34 platoons.From the book containing the names of the three generations of the military personnel, it would help find out the genealogy of the persons affected. The book containing the rank of Jung Bahadur was dated 1865 (1922 B.S.).

There were about 1000 entry books in the commandary Kitab Khana Nijamati (Civil) Darta (entry) section previously under the Home Ministry and currently under the Administration Management Department contains the names of the civil servants, their rank,pay, appointment, transfer, promotion, dismissal and the like from 1848 (1905 B.S.) on. Most of the books had indexes but the indexes covering the period 1923 through 1955 (1980-2021 B.S.)were in the process of preparation. The office set up by Jung Bahadur is now at Harihar Bhavan. About 100 volumes have been brought to the National Archives from the office for preservation.

The Department of Industries had about 200 documents belonging to the Rana period. Some of them are executive orders with the imprint of the sword, while others are charters and regulations. Among them some are interesting (1) the executive order with the imprint of the sword authorizing the setting up of Raghupati Jute Mill in 1912 (1992?) B.S. and the similar order authorising Mandip Giri to produce kerosene oil. Besides the Khadga Nisanas (executive orders) charters, regulations, one-seal order, two-seal order, there were the minute books with the decisions of the Board of Industries at its various meetings.From the perusal of those minute books, we can know the second world war and the proliferation and outlines of industries in the post-world war Nepal.

The Jinsi Adda set up during the administration of Premier Ranoddip Sing was the fore runner of the current Department of Commerce. Its major function was to import goods from foreign countries. This office during the administration of Premier Bir Shumshere remained without discharging any function. Few goods were imported during those days. The practice of the import of foreign goods developed after the administration of Premier Chandra Shumshere in 1901 (1958 B.S.). The office also registered progress. In 1929 (1986) the office was renamed premier's choice goods office and in 1950 (2007 B.S.) it was further renamed as the Department of Central Purchases. After the Department of commerce was set up in 1951 (2008 B.S.), this office was integrated in the Department. The documents of the Jinsi Adda from 1815 (1872 B.S.) on are currently available in the Department of Commerce.

In Baisakh 1939 an office called Nepal Cottage Industry Development Centre was set up. Later on this office became the Department of Cottage Industries. In 1953 (2010 B.S.) it was remained Sri Tribhuvan Village Development Department and it was subordinate to the Ministry of Planning and Development. All the documents of this office from 1939 to 1955 were stored at the Cottage Arrears Disposal Commission and the office called Kumari Chowk, the Kathmandu Valley Section.

In 1923 (1980 B.S.) or there about during the administration of Premier Chandra, the coal mine was discovered and an office called Mine office was established. During the administration of Premier Bhim Shumshere (1929-1932) it was changed into the Geological office. The canal office and Geological office were changed into one office called the Geological and canal office. In 1942 the Geological office was detached and it was called the office of Mines. Khadga Nara Singh Rana became its first Director. This office was changed into the Department of Mines in 1953. The Department of Mines had mainly two types of documents.

(1) The executive order with the sword imprint, the charters and the regulations relating to mines and minerals and

(2) The reports of the specialists. Among the charters and regulations, the prominent documents are: (1) the charter detaching the office of canal from that of Geology, (2) the charter relating to the establishment of the Juddha Research Laboratory, (3) the charters providing special facilities for Nepal Mica Company, Nepal Dang Coal Company, the Himalayan Miners Syndicate Limited and other Companies and (4) the charter dividing the office of Mines into four zones. The reports of the specialists on the subject numbered about one hundred. Among them there are some deserving mention for reference: (1) the report of Dr. A.G. Figram, M.Sc. on cobalt dated 1937 (1994 B.S.), (2) the agreement with overseer Laxman Prasad on cobalt and (3) the report on the proposed supply of drinking water to the town of Biratnagar.

The Department of Survey was founded in 1923 (1980 B.S.) and there was surveying operation in the town of Bhaktapur for the first time. By 1958 the land was surveyed, revenue fixed and cartography prepared and the survey in Bhaktapur under the land reforms programme was conducted in 1964 (2021 B.S.). The cartography of surveying made in Bhaktapur in the year 1923 (1980) and the documents are important public records. The Kathmandu district was surveyed from 1941 through 1947 (1998-2004 B.S.). All the documents except the cartography of the district were destroyed in 1963 (2020 B.S.). The Department of Survey had about 265 items of cartography.

Moreover, the Department of Survey had 2000 items of Cartography of many districts throughout the Kingdom, including those of Kailali, Kanchanpur and Bardia. The Revenue offices of the districts affected maintained the documents and the public records of the respective districts. This procedure facilitated the collection of revenue. The maps and documents relating to boundaries were maintained in the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Defence.

From the statements referred to above it is evident that there is no dearth of public records deemed important from the stand point of administration and history as maintained and preserved in the various Ministries, Departments and Offices of HMG.For the last few years, HMG was made the administration of the country development-oriented. The administrators of to-day should not ignore the leading role played by the public records in further strengthening and vitalising development administration. The administration has to pay attention to the proper management of the public records - one portion of the national resources and has to make maximal utilization of these public records in the development programmes of the nation. In addition to these, these public records have become the most popular and acknowledged materials and facts in the writing of the history of the nations. If we fail to make proper management of the public records which guide the current administrators and instruct the future generations, we are not only losing the most important of our paternal resources but pushing our future generations into darkness.

Records of the Army Headquarters.

The Army headquarter is responsible for the official military management. Prior to 1951 (2008 B.S.) this agency carried out the duties, functions and exercised powers now conducted by the Ministry of Defence. Later on the Royal Nepal Army under-went changes and the Ministry of Defence was established. Twenty offices subordinate to the Ministry of Defence were formed. Among these twenty offices, Nepal Army Headquarter is one.

After the official tour of England of Premier Jung Bahadur a separate office handling military affairs was formed. In the beginning the office was called Jangi Phant (Military Section)and it was named Royal Army Headquarters later on. After the advent of the panchayat democracy, this was called Royal Nepal Army headquarter. This agency has preserved and protected all the documents in respect of its activities. These public records are currently kept at the department of the Commander-in-Chief.This department of Commander-in-Chief first was called Arga.Later on it was called the Department of the Commander-in-Chief's. This department is called commanding or D.M.O.Department. One of the offices subordinate to this office handles public records.

It seems that Royal Army Headquarter was established after Premier Jung Bahadur's visit to England. The history of this office is not very old. The oldest public record available in this office was dated 1835 A.D. (1892 B.S.) and this document provided for the organisation and the pay scale of the army personnel and was kept in a leather-bound book. No public record, prior to 1835 (1892 B.S.) were available in the archives morgue. This shows that the public records have been preserved since 1835 A.D.

The public records available here are found in the form of books with covers. These books are divided into three parts.Part of the books deals with the Royal Palace and members of the Royal family; part 2 with the organisational matters relating to the world war and the part 3 with the organisation of the military affairs. The highlights of pt. I are the marriages,tonsures, birthday anniversaries and births of the members of the Royal family and the orders to the military personnel during the marriage ceremonies and deaths of the members of Rana family.The public records are found in 60 books for the years 1846 to 1951 (1903 to 2008 B.S.) and 38 files for the years 1954 to 1983A.D. (2011-2040 B.S.) in respect of orders given to military personnel during the Nepal visits of the heads of the states from the friendly countries. The part 2 deals with the deployment and the organisation of troops during the world war first and the world war second for the years 1914-1946 A.D. (1971-2003 B.S.) and the part 3 deals with the deployment of Army personnel in the official visits of the King and the Rana Premiers, the catalogue of the goods, military organisation and miscellaneous subjects for 1846 to 1961 A.D. (1903-2008 B.S.). These records are bound in 300 books.

RECORDS OF THE FOREIGN MINISTRY

After the advent of democracy many ministries were organised in 1951 A.D. Among the ministries one handling diplomatic relations was named the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, HMG. This Ministry has recently been shifted to the Shital Niwas Mansion at Maharajgunj.

During the Malla administration prior to the unification of Nepal, the person occupying the office of the commander or the Minister was called Amatya while the person handling fiscal, judicial and foreign affairs was called Mushi. The designation was originally conferred on the Pradhans and it has been their practice to add Mushi as their last name. As the Munshis looked after fiscal, judicial and foreign affairs of the country, the agency handling such affairs was called Munshi Khana office. This office was of great importance like the Ministry of the modern days. There were other offices like the Jaisi Kotha, the Goswara office subordinate to it.

The office called Jaisi Kotha handled the entire correspondences in relation to China and Tibet one person handling China and Tibet section was a Joshi by caste. After his name the office was called Joshi's room. Later on the Joshi's room was called Jaisi's room. In respect of handling correspondence with other countries except China and Tibet, the Munshi Khana carried on the job. the Goswara office handled litigation, arresting the accused, putting in police look-up the untrials, the corruption and the like. After separate offices handling fiscal and judicial matters were organised, the office handling foreign affairs was concurrently called the Munshi Khana and the department of foreign affairs during the administration of premier Chandra. The Jaisi Kotha handling Chinese and Tibetan affairs was re-named "Tibetan Section" by changing the nomenclature of the office. In 1951 A.D. when ministries were formed, all the responsibilities of the Munshi Khana, the Jaisi Kotha, the department of foreign affairs and the Tibetan Section were taken over by the newly formed "Ministry of Foreign Affairs".

All the documents of the correspondences made by the Munshi Khana office and the Jaisi Kotha office in respect of foreign, economic and jidicial sectors prior to the new name of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs was made are preserved as public records. In this way the practice of maintaining public records seems to have been in operation after the unification of Nepal. As the public records in the form of documents are subject to decay, most of them have been lost but the residues of the documents of the Malla period, together with the historical materials, and the historical materials prior to the conquest of Nepal by King Prithvi Narayan Shah are intact. But the public records of the post Prithvi Narayan Shah period out number those prior to that period.

Originally all the documents of public records were kept at the Hanumandhoka throne room in the form of bundles which were taken to the Thapathali palace by premier Jung Bahadur during his administration. Later on during the administration of premier Bhima, they were shifted to his palace at Tangal. In 1990 B.A. the bundles of documents were again taken back to the Hanumandhoka palace. As the country was affected by the great earthquake of 1934, the bundles of documents remained scattered, under these conditions all the bundles of documents were accumulated unsystematically and taken to the army headquarter. After the Ministry of the Foreign Affairs was formed, all those bundles of documents were transported to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. During the great fire of 1974 A.D. (2030 B.S.) in the month of July some of the documents were lost but others were retrieved and restored back to the Foreign Affairs Ministry

Among the documents preserved in the archives section of the Foreign Affairs Ministry are the Lal Mohars, executive orders, premier's sword imprint executive orders, rules and regulations, charters, royal palm prints, ordinances, reference reports, letters, documents, files of documentary correspondences, maps, ledger books and the like. The store room of the archives section contains the bundle of these documents in two racks to their full capacity some of these bundles are dumped on the floor some documents are kept in yellow envelopes. These bundles member currently more than 350 and the envelopes also number more than three handed.

The introductions of these documents in brief are like these. The Lal Mohar is that document of the king with the red seal granting land or remuneration when the king is pleased. The palm imprint document is used when the king is pleased to confer the office of the premier, the Commander-in-Chief and the like. This is also known as Keshari (lion's) palm imprint paper. Though the originals of such documents are not available, their copies are available. The colour of the seal of the Lal Mohar is usually red. Some Lal Mohars may have orange red, yellow and blue colours. The Lal Mohars made after the administration of Chandra Shumshere contain the twelve constallations. Generally the seal of the Lal Mohar contains a symbol of the sword positioned slantwise and the phrase Durga Bhavani in the midst of round 50-pice shaped coin with dots.

The Khadga Nisana is that document of the Rana premier when he is pleased to grant some thing and under it the name of the Rana premier is written. Some Khadga Nisana documents contained the symbol of sword positioned vertically and under it the Rana premier signs on the document. The documents addressed to other foreign countries under the signatures of the Rana premiers are called charters. The documents bearing the signatures of the premier counter-signed by the Commander-in-Chief are double seal orders and the documents with the signature of the Commander-in-Chief alone are called single seal documents. The Sanads (executive order) are applicable to a specified sector generally with rules and regulations and they are more or less the modern counterparts of Gazette. The rules applicable to the general public are called sawals. The Rukka (executive order are where some persons where to be prohibited from doing any thing or where some works under way had to be stopped. Such prohibitory orders are called Rukkas. The documents with the signatures of the Commander-in-Chief counter-signed by four generals in charge of East, West, South and North wings are called Bahuli Nisana. The ordinances are the public injuctions. When the decree on such ordinances are submitted to the authorities by the legal agency, such reference report is called a Sadhak.

Treaties are those documents with stipulations made between two countries after the termination of hostilities. Such documents are also called Dharma Patras. The exchange of letters with presents and other mutual exchange of diplomatic agents are called protocols. A petition is that document praying to the authorities for redressing grievences by a person suffering injustice at the hand of the person so allegedly committing offence. The exchanges of notes between two parties for general correspondence are called letters. In this way the archives section of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs have bundles of documents relating to various subjects.

Various documents from the Tibetan courts dealing with suits of various kinds are also available.The misil is the bunch of documents relating to a suit or the correspondences related to the issue under consideration. These documents relate to the issues of boundary dispute, murder, producing evidences, inheritance and the like.

The files relating to the correspondence about the medals and the import of various kinds of goods are also called misils, but these are presented as files. In this way the documents with correspondence are mostly found in the files. In addition to these, maps of various areas are also found among the files. But currently some maps are still available and others might have been presumably lost in the great Singha Durbar fire of 1973 A.D. The catalogue of the maps is copied from the index of the catalogue (bundle No. 211) and is presented here.

Among the documents preserved in the archives section, the documents relating to the correspondence with Tibet and China exceed others in number. Next to them, there are documents relating to the correspondence with the British India and a few documents of correspondence made with other nations. There are ledgers containing rules and regulations on various subjects, the ledgers of the rules and instructions, of the charters, and those of the executive orders. The highlights of these public records are these. In the collection of this source, the archives have been classified in this way:

1. From the envelope section:

   (a) The envelopes containing Lal Mohars, executive orders, orders, letters, chronicle number approximately 300.

2. From the bundles section:

   (a) There are 74 bundles with Lal Mohars, Rukkas, Sanads, letters and chronicle.

   (b) There are files put in 201 bundles containing the correspondence about the boundary dispute, the import of goods, medals and the army.

   (c) There are 63 volumes of the ledgers containing Lal Mohars, Khadga Nisanas, rules and instructions, executive orders and the charters.

CC-0. Nepal Sanskrit Academy, Kathmandu

Digitized by Sarayu Trust Foundation Delhi and eGangotri.

(d) There are 104 bundles of documents relating to various suits and other documents relating to specific issues.

(e) 234 copies of the map on the basis of the file of the catalogue in the list.

A supervision of the documents in the archives section was conducted with a view to making proper management prior to the great fire of the Singha Durbar Secretariate in 1973 A.D. and some of those documents were handed over to the National Archives. Immediately after the holocaust, that operation remained suspended and incomplete. The list of those record is yet to be catalogued and classified and they remain in hodge-podge state. The bundles are arranged numerically, but are not maintained in an organised manner.

A single bundle has 3 or 4 kinds of number. This list is prepared on the basis of those numbers that can be easily identified out of so many numbers. Most of the bundle of documents do not contain the records of the same type. They contain miscellany. Inspite of that efforts have been made to include the subjects as far as possible, but it cannot be claimed that it is all-inclusive. The matter taken from the bundle refers to that bundle out of which it is taken. Therefore as an example, this supervisory report has been presented with a view to throwing light on giving general information that a particular bundle has such and such subject and it covers the period from the data to the date specified and it has so many items.

Among the entire public records maintained here, the documents in the envelopes section seem to be oldest. Among these, the copy of renovation of the water conduit of Patan Sunahiti dated 821 N.S. (1758 B.S.) and the chronicle of Chhatra Shah dated 1527 Shake (1662 B.A.) may be cited as the example of oldest documents. Among the maps the oldest is dated 1874 B.S.). It covers the area from Arra (Karra ?) to the Narayani.

In respect of the facilities of making these archives available to the researchers, the Ministry has extended this service to the scholars. More priority is given currently to those who want to study and research on these materials from the government affiliated institutions than those who do these operations on their own. Facilities on the basis of their involvement and priority are available but they are permitted to copy the documents, but the facility of photocopying or microfilming is totally prohibited.

It has been cergent to protect and preserve the public records available here. Many documents are so wet that they have become now stiff and stark and some documents have become so worn by time and dampness that they are urgently in need of getting microfilmed as some of these documents are very important and worth-preserving-a must.
